

Angelic canopy (New version)

We have just prepared a new batch of Angelic Canopy as one of the plants were in exceptional bloom, and was a choice from two plants. The photographs are of the setup for the essence making and the actual flower, the impact is striking.

On consuming the mother, tincture on a Sunday morning is not a good idea, because the first vision was of a dark haired woman, with ear-length curly hair, who appeared on my right side, and then she next sat on my left knee and I had my right hand on her knee. She was not looking at me but straight ahead and she had dark eyes which were her noteworthy feature. I could not shake her image off from my mind and it is only in retrospect that I wondered why I was getting these images, I was tired and lay down for a bit, and she appeared at my bed room door and wanted to know if I wanted her company!!

I had to go to church and for 10 mins in the church service my mind was totally separated from the real time and in a different place entirely. With this woman occupying a significant amount of my time. I think this woman is symbolic of an energetic relationship, which was first brought out in the original readings of the essence. I had a heightened sense of arousal on taking the essence, which means that it has an effect on the 2nd chakra (not reported in the original notes on Angelic canopy) The sense of arousal is a 2nd and 4th chakra combination effect,

It appears that this essence is a new level of power and when blended with the old batch, which it will be, will be something to be experienced.

I then made a blend of the two batches to see what its effect it and here is what followed: What appeared to happen was there was a damping down of the emotional need to connect with someone spiritually, emotionally and physically while having a sense of a greater awareness of the need to be in Love if that is what you call it.

As you know I don't like coincidences but I was woken by my neighbour that someone was tampering with my car and she approached him and he said something weird (not important) she then woke me and when I came out, part of the contents of my car had been stolen, and they were in my neighbours garden at the front as was the thief who had ordered a taxi from the taxi company I use to help him take the stuff away. I normally lock my car whether it was due to the electronic faults that the car was open, as I was very tired the previous night. Losing the essences would not be a major problem but my client records were taken, they were all in the garden, so I lost nothing,

(only the coins I keep to pay for parking and the tunnel) yet my sleep had been so profound that I did not wake up. Thank God I was being protected!! The thief sauntered away and though I went with the police to find him he had got away.

Don's feeling on taking the essence and afterwards was with this 2nd batch; my feeling is that it is as if our 'helpers' are saying that now we are shifting, to bring the spiritual aspect into being in our bodies. Something about living in harmony and peace in the various levels of our being, without removing ourselves from any part or aspect. The George Harrison song was so persistent, lasting in my mind for many hours.

I didn't tell you one aspect of my experience of the mother tincture. It left me with the feeling in my heart which I can only liken to that warm soft inner glow in the heart that you have soon after being in love with someone. Not the passionate feeling of falling in love, but that warm glow that comes once the relationship is there with the loved one. That lasted all through the night, after the making of the essence.

There is also a de-stressing that happens, as I mentioned before, but it is something I noticed again when I took another sip yesterday morning.

It obviously is a very powerful essence as this following observation shows:

Immediately I got pins and needles sensation over the left side of my temple and the upper half of the left side of my scalp. This was very intense and eventually calmed down although I can still feel it now - some 5 mins. later. This was followed by a strong tightening of the solar plexus area - and the feeling of nausea. This changed into deep grief for about 1 minute then went back to the tightness in the SP which I still have. The final and more subtle feeling is that of gentle pins and needles from head to toe and a feeling of coolness. Interestingly there is a small pale pink patch on the back of my hand and a corresponding spot on the palm of the other where I put the drop and there is an accompanying burning sensation. (The sense of pink or of a pink veil has been seen with this essence) it became clear what the grief was. It tapped into the loss of connection with spirit / universal consciousness whilst being human. A feeling of being separated that was very deep seated and I feel goes back many lifetimes. I suspect that the SP reaction is also linked to the fear of being 'lost' or permanently separated - not being able to go back 'home'. My hands are still burning; I am still tingling although the pink patches are fading.

Another of the provers had this to report: Instantly, I felt delicate chiffon veil. Very gentle energy spread into my heart, neck and up to head. Unwinding. I became a delicate flower sitting near the pond, watching fish swimming in it. Very peaceful. I saw some scenes in the pond then. First one was of a destroyed city, a ruined city, no people around, just many destroyed concrete city. The chiffon veil comes down from the sky and wraps this city and eases the energy there. Next I saw the army iron weapons, guns artillery – hard metals. Then this chiffon veil again appeared from the sky and wrapped them. I felt so much gentle smooth nice loving energy in my hear area, and wanted to hold a lover without clothes on. I just wanted to feel skin touching my heart area physically – a nice loving holding touch.

Having left it another day and having taken the blend, the essence produces a yearning for communion both physical and emotional, there is a strong affinity for the root of all emotions and a need for a greater fulfilment, no doubt this will be more obvious as the blend is consumed more widely and it fulfils all the expectations of the previous incarnations and more. It is quite clear that the essence is targeting the spiritual chamber of the heart and the higher heart chakra; it is a protective canopy with sentient devic energy.

This essence is the culmination of the original essences work and I would suspect that this we may encounter in the other older essences as well.
